A detailed topographic map of France, showing its administrative boundaries (departments) outlined in black. The map includes numerous cities and towns, with major ones labeled in bold. The terrain is depicted with green shading and contour lines, indicating elevation. A prominent blue line outlines the coastline. Key geographical features include the Alps in the southeast, the Pyrenees in the south, and the Massif Central in the west. The map also shows the English Channel to the northwest and the Mediterranean Sea to the south.

The plot shows a single vertical bar at an altitude of approximately 900 meters. The y-axis represents cumulative observations, ranging from 0.00 to 1.00. The x-axis represents altitude in meters, ranging from 0 to 3500. The bar is blue and reaches a cumulative value of 1.00.
